ADVANCED AND SLOW LEARNERS POLICY

- The policy for students who learn at different speeds is designed to help everyone succeed. For those who need more time to grasp things, we make sure they have several chances to show what they've learned. Instead of just one test, we consider their best scores from a few different assessments to decide their final grades.
- We don't stop there. Students who might find certain subjects tricky get extra classes to catch up. These special classes, called remedial classes, focus on helping them understand the material better. We also use different and creative ways of teaching just for them. We call these methods "innovative pedagogical practices," and they're tailored to make learning easier and more fun.
- Now, imagine using cool tools like computers and the internet to help with learning. That's exactly what we do for students who might need some extra support. We call them ICT tools, and they're like special gadgets that make learning easier and more interesting.
- But it's not just about those who might need a bit more time. We also recognize and celebrate the students who catch on quickly and excel in their studies. These superstars are honoured at a big event called the annual day function. Their names and achievements are shared in a report for everyone to see. This isn't just to pat them on the back—it's to inspire them to keep up the good work and motivate others to aim high too.
- These bright students, the ones who really get the hang of things fast, are encouraged to do even more. They're invited to take part in different events held by the college. Things like seminars, workshops, and webinars. They don't just attend; they're given the chance to share what they know. It's like being a teacher for a day, and it's a great way for them to grow and learn even more.
- In a nutshell, the policy makes sure everyone gets the help they need. For those who need more time, there's extra support and creative teaching methods. And for those who pick things up quickly, there are opportunities to shine and share their knowledge. It's all about making sure every student can succeed in their own way.
